The Second Ending

Fuad at-Takarli

Translated by

Zaid Alamiri

Published in the London –based Banipal no.73 , Spring 2022

He traipsed, back bent, along the dirty path beside the river. The sun went down; but he kept walking at a slow pace punctuated by an unusual leftward-inclined jerking motion. He had no intention to go anywhere; the street in this remote area was completely empty: no people, no cars.